Shoemaker Chair

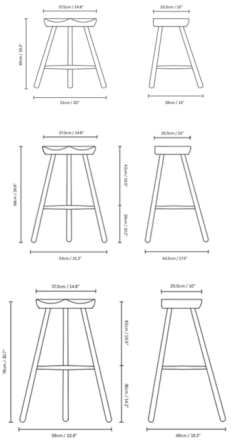

By Form & Refine

Description

The Shoemaker Chair's seat has been rendered out of one large solid piece of wood which, because of the variations in the woodgrain, makes every Shoemaker Chair completely unique. Together, the turned legs and the stabilizing T connection create a harmonic and aesthetic piece of furniture with strong references to the history and experimentation of Nordic design. The construction may look simple but it utilizes a technique which is very difficult to master and the wood must be carefully handled and accurately carved to ensure the highest comfort. At the end of the process every model is finished by hand before going into a three-step process of staining or oiling surface treatments.
