Parentesi Ceiling To Floor Lamp

By FLOS

Description

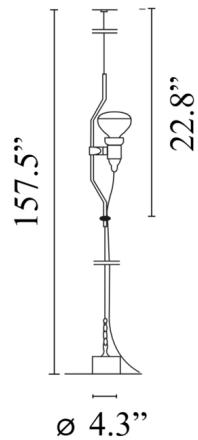

Step into the world of revolutionary design with the Flos Parentesi Ceiling to Floor Lamp, an ingenious creation originally conceived in 1971 by the visionary minds of Achille Castiglioni and Pio Manzu. This lamp redefines versatility, featuring a single light bulb suspended by a taut steel cable that runs from your floor to the ceiling, creating an almost invisible infrastructure. The bulb is ingeniously held in place by a tubular bracket that strikingly resembles a parentheses symbol, from which the piece derives its name. This bracket not only secures the lamp but also creates tension on the cable, allowing you to easily adjust the lamp's height by simply sliding the tube along the cable. Furthermore, the lamp holder can be swiveled 360 degrees, providing direct lighting in any direction. Anchored by a weighted base and including a ceiling hook and canopy for installation, this plug-in design with an integrated dimmer switch on the cord offers unparalleled flexibility and minimalist brilliance, making it a timeless icon of Italian design.
